朗讀稿: Tea Leaves Can Clean Water

Black tea! Green tea! Bubble tea! Tea shops are everywhere in Taiwan! Many of us drink a lot of tea. Do you?

We buy about one billion cups of bubble tea every year in Taiwan. We use lots of tea leaves!

What happens to them?

Almost all tea shops throw away tea leaves. Thousands of kilograms go to landfills every day.

The leaves rot and make a gas. The gas makes the Earth hotter.

In Northern Ireland, a part of the UK, people drink a lot of tea too. A researcher there found a way to reuse tea leaves. He makes them into a product that cleans dirty water!

This tea leaf product takes out heavy metals from water. Heavy metals are bad for health.

Some can cause cancer. Cleaner water helps people and animals be healthier.

After the tea leaf product is used, it can be reused to make batteries! That's reusing after reusing!

Used tea leaves can help clean water and make batteries. Let's find more ways to reuse things and have a better world!
